Adjoining: B&B Italia has branched out into outdoor living, with success. The company called in leading designers to sharpen existing models for outdoor use, as well as to develop completely new forms. For instance, the reintroduced Swell and 1966 collections by Richard Schultz are proving to be highly up to date. In addition, Antonio Citterio has redesigned his Charles sofa system for outdoor use. And B&B Italia recently presented a remarkable new piece: the Titikaka bench by Naoto Fukasawa. Here, beside the swimming pool, a lounge element from the Canasta range designed by Patricia Urquiola.

Below: cheerful Mexican moods at EMU, here showing off the steel-mesh Ivy chairs. That trend-setting Italian company is celebrating its 60th anniversary in 2011.

Right-hand page: a sofa in the Great Lakes collection from the celebrated American company, Sutherland. It was designed by the famous Terry Hunziker and is made from Ecoplex®, a composite material produced exclusively for Sutherland.
